A Place to Grow

Mia puts a seed in a red pot. She gives it water. She sets the pot by a sunny window. Each day, she looks for a green shoot. On Friday, a tiny leaf appears. Her brother wants to pour in more water, but Mia checks the soil first. It is still wet. She explains that the plant needs care, not a flood. Mia starts a notebook. She draws the leaf and records how tall the plant is. A week later, the stem leans toward the window. She turns the pot so the other side faces the light. At school, Mia compares notes with a friend whose plant grew in a dark cupboard. Both plants received water, but the cupboard plant was pale. They think light explains the difference. Their teacher asks what else might have affected the plants.

MY THINKING

1. What does Mia put in the pot?

2. What color is the pot?

3. What does Mia give the seed?

4. Where does Mia put the pot?

5. Why does Mia check the soil before adding water?
